

Advance Information

Representing Ireland:
100 years of
Irish foreign policy,
1919–2019

John Gibney, Michael Kennedy, Kate O'Malley

Final cover to be revealed

Representing Ireland: 100 years of Irish foreign policy, 1919–2019

Authors: John Gibney, Michael Kennedy, Kate O'Malley

Publication date: January 2019

Extent: 350 approx.

Format: Hardback, illustrated

Rights: Worldwide

ISBN: 978-1-908997-96-8

Publisher: Royal Irish Academy

Price: €30 / £28 / $60

<http://bit.ly/RepresentingIreland>

Ireland had a foreign policy and a diplomatic service before there was an internationally recognised independent Irish state. The origins of the modern Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade lie in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs established as one of the first four government departments of the first Dáil in January 1919. This richly illustrated book is a history of Irish foreign policy, rather than an institutional history of the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade itself (though the two obviously go hand in hand). It explores how a small state such as Ireland has related to the wider world, by examining how Irish diplomats and politicians responded to the challenges presented by the upheavals of the twentieth century and how this small European state engaged with the world, from the Versailles peace conference of 1919 to the globalisation of the twenty-first century.

About the authors:

John Gibney holds a doctorate in History from Trinity College Dublin. He has researched and published widely on Restoration Ireland, Irish historiography, and the Irish Revolution.

Michael Kennedy is the Executive Editor of the Documents on Irish Foreign Policy series. He is a member of the Irish Manuscripts Commission, a Research Associate of the Centre for Contemporary Irish History, Trinity College Dublin and a Visiting Professor at Liverpool Hope University. He is a regular commentator on radio and television on modern history and current affairs.

Kate O'Malley is an editor of the Documents on Irish Foreign Policy series. She is Secretary of the Royal Irish Academy's International Affairs Committee and a Research Associate of the Centre for Contemporary Irish History, Trinity College Dublin.

