

Advance Information

Early Medieval Ireland, AD 400-1100

Authors: Aidan O'Sullivan, Finbar McCormick, Thomas Kerr, Lorcan Harney
Reprint publication date: March 2021

Extent: 608 pages

Format: Hardback, illustrated

Rights: Worldwide

ISBN HB: 9781904890607

ISBN PDF: 9781908996299

ISBN EPUB: 9781908996305

Publisher: Royal Irish Academy

Price: €80/£75/$160

www.ria.ie/publications

How did people create and live in their own worlds in early medieval Ireland? What did they actually do? And to what end did they do it? This book investigates and reconstructs from archaeological evidence how early medieval Irish people lived together as social groups, worked the land as farmers, worshipped God, made and used objects and buried their dead around them. It uses evidence from excavations conducted between 1930 and 2012 to explore how people used their landscapes, dwellings and material culture to effect and negotiate social, ideological and economic continuities and changes during the period ad 400-1100.

About the authors:

Aidan O'Sullivan is a Senior Lecturer at the School of Archaeology, University College Dublin, and a Principal Investigator of the Early Medieval Archaeology Project.

Finbar McCormick is a Senior Lecturer at the School of Geography, Archaeology and Palaeoecology at Queen's University Belfast.

Thomas R. Kerr is a Research Fellow on the Early Medieval Archaeology Project, at Queen's University Belfast.

Lorcan Harney worked as a Research Archaeologist (2007-10) with the Early Medieval Archaeology Project at UCD School of Archaeology.