The inquiry found that: 24% of ethnic minority students had experienced racial harassment

Of these, 20% had faced physical assaults, the majority had experienced name-calling and other things including micro-aggression.

More than a quarter of staff said they experienced racist name-calling, insults and jokes. Much of this harassment took place in office environments, frequently in plain sight of their colleagues.

International students highlighted about feeling unwelcome, isolated and vulnerable.

The report suggests that Universities are overconfident in their systems and processes, although some progress has been made, the reality is that the culture is about the institutions reputation first, and culture second.

Race Equality Charter (REC)

Improving the representation, progression and success of minority ethnic staff and students within higher education

REC is a framework that offers UK higher education institutions a strategic and holistic approach to advancing race equality – it focuses on both the staff and students.
Guiding principles of REC

1. Racial inequalities are not necessarily overt, isolated incidents and can manifest themselves in everyday situations, processes and behaviours.
2. UK higher education cannot reach its full potential until individuals from all ethnic backgrounds can benefit equally from the opportunities it affords.
3. Solutions to racial inequalities must focus on institutional culture change, avoiding a deficit model.
4. Black and minority ethnic staff and students are not a homogenous group.
5. All individuals have multiple identities, and the intersection of those identities should be considered wherever possible.
The road ahead…

• Collect your and look at your evidence
• Have and start the right conversations about race (and listen)
• Pay attention to lived experiences
• Use these to inform actions to change systems
• Be an active leader on race equality
• Be an ally (a verb – not a noun)
